Epirubicin and cisplatin as first-line therapy for advanced non-small-cell lung cancer: a Spanish Cooperative Group experience. The prognosis of patients with advanced non-small-cell lung cancer (NSCLC) remains poor despite the introduction of new therapeutic strategies. There is no standard treatment for these patients, and chemotherapy must be constantly adapted to the characteristics of each individual case. We report the results of a Spanish Cooperative Group study in patients treated with the combination of epirubicin and cisplatin (EC) as first-line chemotherapy for advanced NSCLC. Four hundred eleven patients with advanced NSCLC were entered onto the study. Patients in stages IIIa and IIIb were randomized to receive either epirubicin at a dose of 60 mg/m², continuous infusion (days 1-3), and cisplatin at a dose of 100 mg/m², continuous infusion (days 1-3), or epirubicin at a dose of 45 mg/m², and cisplatin at a dose of 85 mg/m². Both groups were treated with 15 mg/m² of granulocyte colony-stimulating factor (G-CSF) daily for 5 days after each cycle. The median number of cycles administered was 3. Median follow-up was 12 months. One hundred eighty-six patients were in stage IIIa, and 95 patients were in stage IIIb. Two hundred seven (49%) were male and 204 (51%) were female, and the median age was 60 years (range: 27-82). Response rate was 26% in stage IIIa and

This invention relates to a mast pipe for use in a vehicle such as an automobile. Usually, at a high portion of a vehicle such as an automobile, there is provided a mast pipe, which extends upwardly from a front floor panel, in order to draw a cable or a wire, which is provided underneath the floor panel. However, because of the fact that the mast pipe is mounted at a substantially high position, it should be prevented from engaging with a guide rail or the like, which is mounted to the vehicle body, and, due to this engagement, a longitudinal movement of the mast pipe is restricted, so that a problem arises that the position of the mast pipe is limited with respect to its longitudinal direction. A suspicious package sent to a Minnesota polling location in southern Minnesota has been cleared by local officials and turned over to authorities in Atlanta where it is being examined for possible explosives. The device, which was found at an Acme location in Schwan's Point around 3 p.m. on Election Day, was sealed by police officers at the scene and sent to a Federal Bureau of Investigation lab for testing. Authorities received a tip after finding an unattended package at the polling location and authorities in Atlanta have been notified. No device has yet been removed from the package. "I've never seen something like this," local election official Doug Fullerton told CBS Minnesota. "We were just kind of go, 'Oh, that's kind of weird,'" Fullerton said. "We've never had any kind of issues like that before this election." Get Breaking News Delivered to Your Inbox The suspicious package is believed to have been hand-delivered in a white shopping bag, according to the Minneapolis Police Department. e79caf774b

(Like the name of the so-called criminal-biker-gang-forming-hamlet movie that takes place in the infamous Hamlet-of-Hamllins.) I'm torn because growing up in a small, isolated town like ours, with a mom who loves watching reality TV, we had channeled through TV all of our social interactions and romance. I know this is a cliché, but I soooo miss the days where I spent my evenings (especially with the time I now have to myself) to myself, uninterrupted by either TV or a telephone with an answering machine.
