We can apply an opaque mask, use the brush tool to fill the mask, or we can paint about with a brush tool, shape or pen tool. A mask allows us to manipulate the colors in the area that is under it with the use of a black to white color selection tool. This allows us to select an area we want to mask and paint to it. With a mask set on an image, you can use all the tools normally used for painting and adjusting opacity. With a few tools we can also increase and decrease the opacity of a new layer. This allows us to add and remove areas from the main layer. The brush tool allows us to paint in areas with a range of color or shades that we want. You can increase the size of the brush, the amount of pressure applied, and the width of strokes. If you brush a large area it can apply multiple strokes on the layer. You can use the settings we've discussed earlier to use a natural-looking area where you can increase and decrease the opacity of an area within the layer. The brush tool allows us to move the brush into different shapes of a mask and to make any color adjustments. With the addition of the Marquee tool, we can add freehand marks or shapes on to a new layer. 933d7f57e6
